

Disclosure Statement for the American Economic Association

Markus K. Brunnermeier

January, 2013

To date, no single relationship (other than my salary from Princeton University) has accounted for more than 10 percent of my aggregate annual income in that year.

Significant Remunerated Activities:

Speaking engagements and lectures

- Stifterverband der Deutschen Wirtschaft, 2012
- Ambrosetti – The European House, 2011
- Center for Investor Education, 2011
- Wim Duisenberg School of Finance, 2010
- FEBRABAN, Brazil, 2009

Central banks

- ECB, ESRB, Bank of England, National Bank of Austria, Swiss National Bank, Bank of Japan, Federal Reserve, New York Fed, Bank of Canada, Bank of Chile, Bank of Korea

International financial institution

- IMF

No expert testimony for law suits or paid consulting work for private cooperation to date.

Research Grants:

Sloan Foundation 2011-12

Guggenheim Fellowship, 2010-11

University of Chicago, T.W. Schultz Prize and Lecture, 2010

INQUIRE Europe, Research Grant

Visiting Scholar and Other:

Milton Friedman Institute, visiting scholar 2011

American Economic Review, Journal of Finance, Associated Editorship

Significant Non-Compensated Activities:

American Finance Association: Director

Financial Advisory Roundtable and Monetary Policy Panel, Federal Reserve Bank of New York, 2006 – present

INET Advisory Board Member, 2009 – present