

Joshua Rauh - Funding and Outside Activities (as of 7/2013)

Since July 2012, I am a Professor of Finance at the Stanford Graduate School of Business and a Senior Fellow at the Hoover Institution. I receive some research funding from both Stanford GSB and Hoover, which I spend on the research topics of my choosing.

Between July 2009 and June 2012 I was an Associate Professor at the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University. Through the Kellogg and the Zell Center for Risk Research at Kellogg, I received a research budget which I spent on the research topics of my choosing.

In addition to my role as a faculty member, I have a few outside activities and affiliations. In the past three years I have:

(i) been a research associate and faculty research fellow of the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), a non-profit organization devoted to economic research.

(ii) been a research fellow of Netspar (Netherlands), a network aimed at connecting pension practice and pension science.

(iii) periodically received standard speaking fees, consulting fees, or honoraria. During the last three years, I have received these types of fees from each of the following organizations: the Brookings Institution, the Global Association of Risk Professionals (GARP), Blue Cross Blue Shield of South Carolina, the Gerson Lehrman Group, Netspar, NBER, the New America Foundation, the Milken Institute, Stanford University, the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, Cornerstone Research, Loyola Marymount University, and the Hoover Institution.
