

William Kerr Disclosure Statement

The author declares that he has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

The author performed consulting projects over the last three years for Keystone Strategy regarding innovation and competition among high-tech firms that are included in the paper's firm sample. Neither project related to lobbying activity or immigration policy.

The author has discussed lobbying on high-skilled immigration issues with several lobbyists from organizations like Microsoft and the City of New York. These discussions have been informal, the author was not compensated in any way as a result, and these past contacts have not reviewed the results of this paper.

The author received financial research support from Harvard Business School, the Bank of Finland, and the Kauffman Foundation that aided in this work.