Disclosure Statement for MS AER 2012-0506 “E-Lections: Voting Behavior and the Internet”

I declare that I have no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

From September 2008 to June 2012, I worked as Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute of Economics in Jena, Germany. From September 2008 to December 2011, I received a Ph.D scholarship from the German Max Planck Society. During that time, we started compiling the election data.

From June 2012 to August 2012, I received a scholarship from the Graduate Academy at the Friedrich-Schiller-University of Jena. The scholarship of the Graduate Academy is designated to support young researchers and does not involve any further obligations.
