

Disclosure statement: Long Run Impact of Cash Transfer to Poor Families

Submitted to the American Economic Review

1) I have no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

2) No party had any right to review the contents of this paper prior to submission.

2) I have obtained IRB approval for this project from the Brown University IRB.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Anna Aizer".

Anna Aizer

Disclosure Statement
“Long Run Impact of Cash Transfers to Poor Families”

Submitted to the American Economic Review

- 1) I have no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.
- 2) No party had any right to review the contents of this paper prior to submission.
- 3) I have obtained IRB approval for this project from the University of Toronto’s Ethics Board Review.

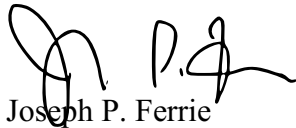

Sincerely,

Shari Eli
April 16, 2014

Disclosure Statement
“The Long Run Impact of Cash Transfers to Poor Families”

1. I have received no significant financial support, summing to at least $10,000 in the past three years, in the form of consultant fees, retainers, grants and the like, nor have I received any in-kind support from any party with an interest in this article.
2. I do not hold any paid or unpaid positions as officer, director, or board member of relevant non-profit organizations or profit-making entities.
3. No party had the right to review the paper prior to its circulation.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'J. P. Ferrie', is written over the printed name.

Joseph P. Ferrie
April 16, 2014

Disclosure Statement

Paper: “The Long Run Impact of Cash Transfers to Poor Families”

Author: Adriana Lleras-Muney (UCLA)

This work was generously supported by internal grants from the California Center for Population Research (CCPR) and an Academic Senate at the University of California Los Angeles.

The author declares that she has no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

This paper involved the collection of primary data from publicly available records. Lleras-Muney obtained IRB approval for the collection and use of the data (IRB#10-001351-CR-00003)