Paper: The Evolution of the Online Platform Economy: Evidence from Five Years of Banking Data

Author: Amar Hamoudi

1. Every submitted article should state the sources of financial support for the particular research it describes. If none, that fact should be stated.

This research was entirely funded by JPMorgan Chase & Co.

2. Each author of a submitted article should identify each interested party from whom he or she has received significant financial support, summing to at least $10,000 in the past three years, in the form of consultant fees, retainers, grants and the like. The disclosure requirement also includes in-kind support, such as providing access to data. If the support in question comes with a non-disclosure obligation, that fact should be stated, along with as much information as the obligation permits. If there are no such sources of funds, that fact should be stated explicitly. An “interested” party is any individual, group, or organization that has a financial, ideological, or political stake related to the article.

I have received no pecuniary or in-kind support from any interested party. Other lines of business within JPMorgan Chase & Co (my employer) may have a financial stake in one or more Online Platform Economy businesses, but I would not be aware of that stake in any detail.

3. Each author should disclose any paid or unpaid positions as officer, director, or board member of relevant non-profit organizations or profit-making entities. A “relevant” organization is one whose policy positions, goals, or financial interests relate to the article.

4. The disclosures required above apply to any close relative or partner of any author.

5. Each author must disclose if another party had the right to review the paper prior to its circulation.
