

“Do the Rich Get Richer in the Stock Market? Evidence from India.”
Disclosure Statement

Financial support

Financial support for this article was provided by research grants awarded to John Y. Campbell and Tarun Ramadorai by the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation and the International Growth Centre.

Data provision

The data were provided to the authors by the National Securities Depository Limited (NSDL) with the approval of the Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI).

John Campbell

All parties from which John Campbell has received significant financial considerations over the past three years are listed in his publicly available disclosures of such outside activities, available at this link: <https://scholar.harvard.edu/campbell/outsideactivities>. As far as he is aware, none of these sources of financial considerations have any direct interest in the topic of this paper, meaning that they are not likely to come under the provided definition of “interested parties.”

All significant positions that John Campbell holds are publicly available on his CV, as well as via the outside activities link provided in (2) above. His paid and unpaid affiliations do not place any formal restrictions on his published work.

Tarun Ramadorai

All parties from which Tarun Ramadorai has received significant financial considerations over the past three years are listed in his publicly available disclosures of such outside activities, available at this link: <http://www.tarunramadorai.com/?section=5>. As far as he is aware, none of these sources of financial considerations have any direct interest in the topic of this paper, meaning that they are not likely to come under the provided definition of “interested parties.”

All significant positions that Tarun Ramadorai holds are publicly available on his CV, as well as via the outside activities link provided in (2) above. His paid and unpaid affiliations do not place any formal restrictions on his published work.

Ben Ranish

Ben Ranish holds a (paid) position at the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve. He has received no outside financial support for this research, and holds no relevant outside positions. As this work was not conducted using data owned by the Federal Reserve, no other party had the right to review this work.