

American Economic Journals Disclosure Statement
(Please include one for every author of the paper.)

Date: May 7, 2019

Author Name: Justine Hastings

Manuscript Title: “Advertising and Environmental Stewardship: Evidence from the BP Oil Spill”

Disclosure Statement: I gratefully acknowledge general funding from Brown University’s Department of Economics and Population Studies and Training Center. Beyond this, I declare that I have received no financial support for this particular project, and I have not received significant financial support from outside interested parties. However, I have had, during the time conducting the research in this paper, interests that could be considered to be related to the research described in this paper. First, the paper use data from Oil Price Information Service. I have provided expert advice on data quality, data sources and industry structure to OPIS, and I have provided them with technical memos and summaries of research related to use of their data in the retail gasoline industry. For these services, I was able to use data at discount. Second, I have served as an expert economist for the State of New Hampshire in a case against several major oil companies over groundwater pollution related to MTBE, an additive in motor gasoline. I served as an economic consultant for the legal team representing the State of New Jersey in a pollution case against ExxonMobil.

Justine Hastings