“Disability and Distress: The Effect of Disability Programs on Financial Outcomes”

Manasi Deshpande

1. We received financial support from the Washington Center for Equitable Growth, the Ronzetti Initiative for the Study of Labor Markets at the Becker-Friedman Institute, and from the U.S. Social Security Administration through grant #5 DRC12000002-06 to the National Bureau of Economic Research as part of the SSA Disability Research Consortium. I, Manasi Deshpande, received compensation from the Social Security Administration through an Intergovernmental Personnel Agreement (2016 – present), which makes me an SSA employee, provides access to SSA data, and provides modest compensation.
2. I received no other significant financial support from an interested party.
3. I served as a member of the Social Security Advisory Board’s Disability Policy Panel from March 2014 to December 2014, for which I was paid a $2,500 honorarium. The Social Security Advisory Board is a distinct entity from the Social Security Administration. I also have an Intergovernmental Personnel Agreement with SSA (2016 – present), which makes me an SSA employee, provides access to SSA data, and provides modest compensation.
4. I have nothing to disclose for close relatives or partners.
5. The Social Security Administration requires that all manuscripts using confidential SSA data be reviewed for disclosure avoidance. SSA reviewed this paper per this requirement.

The University of Chicago Institutional Review Board reviewed and approved this project.
