

Disclosure statement “Closing the gap: The effect of reducing complexity and uncertainty in college pricing on the choices of low-income students”: Libassi

In the past three years, Libassi has received significant financial support (in the form of employment) from the College Board, George Washington University, and the Center for American Progress. He has received in-kind support from the University of Michigan’s Office of Enrollment Management, and the Michigan Department of Education – Center for Educational Performance and Information.

Positions with relevant organizations:

Libassi holds no paid or unpaid positions as officer, director, or board member of relevant non-profit organizations or profit-making entities.

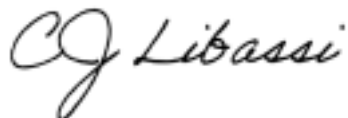

Reviewing rights:

According to the data use agreement between the researchers and the University of Michigan’s Office of Enrollment Management (OEM), any results that make use of data shared by OEM (which includes application, admission, enrollment, and financial aid data) must be authorized by OEM (in consultation with other UM offices as appropriate) before publication.

Our partners at the Michigan Department of Education (MDE) also maintain ownership of all data approved for use and provided by MDE and the Center for Educational Performance and Information (CEPI) for the purposes of this project. Any results that make use of data shared by MDE and CEPI must be provided to these state agencies for review 30 days prior to publishing.

IRB approval:

This project was approved by the University of Michigan’s Health Sciences and Behavioral Sciences Institutional Review Board, under the study research ID HUM00096289, and Syracuse University’s Institutional Review Board, under the study research ID 16-264.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "CJ Libassi". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

CJ Libassi