Disclosure Statement

Dear Members of the Editorial Committee,

I am writing in the context of the submission of my paper “Neighbors’ Effects on University Enrollment”.

I declare that I have no relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

The data used in this project comes from different Chilean public agencies, including the Ministry of Education and the DEMRE. According to the agreements I signed, I do not need their approval to publish the findings of my work. However, some of the data I use in this project is considered personal information and therefore cannot be shared with third parties. I am attaching to this submission a repository that I plan to make public once the paper is finished. It includes the code and also detailed information about the different datasets used in this project and on how to get access to them.

I did not obtained Institutional Review Board approval for this project. On it I only use administrative data already being collected by government agencies. Following the “Research Ethics Policy and Procedures” in place at LSE for Ph.D. students, this project was approved by my supervisors Steve Pischke and Johannes Spinnewijn.

Sincerely,

Andrés Barrios Fernández
