

Disclosure statement

Emma Riley

“Resisting Social Pressure in the Household Using Mobile Money: Experimental Evidence on Microenterprise Investment in Uganda”

1. The source of funding is shown in the opening note to the paper.
2. In the past 3 years, I have received funding from Innovation for Poverty Action, JPAL and the University of Oxford. Any of these may be construed as having an interest in this research, even though this particular project was not funded through their grants apart from the sources listed under (1).
3. I am not an officer, director, or board member of any organization.
4. None of the above disclosures apply to my family or relatives.
5. No other party, apart from my co-authors, had the right to review the manuscript. Numerous comments were received from academic and policy presentations and counterparts, but we had full discretion in the content of the article.
6. IRB approval was as obtained from Oxford University on the 23rd November 2016 with reference ECONCIA16-17-006.