Paper: Putting US Fiscal Policy on a Sustainable Path

I have received no financial support for this project.

I do not know who would be considered an “interested party” for a broad paper on US fiscal policy. My only significant sources of payments during the past three years have been Harvard University, where I am employed, and the Peterson Institute for International Economics, where I am employed also. My husband’s only significant sources of payments during the past three years have been Harvard University, where he is employed, and Abt Global, a government contractor on whose board he sits.
