

Disclosure Statement

Incentive Complexity, Bounded Rationality, and Effort Provision

Disclosure Principles

Submissions to the AEA journals should conform to the AEA disclosure principles which state:

1. Every submitted article should state the sources of financial support for the particular research it describes. If none, that fact should be stated.
2. Each author of a submitted article should identify each interested party from whom he or she has received significant financial support, summing to at least $10,000 in the past three years, in the form of consultant fees, retainers, grants and the like. The disclosure requirement also includes in-kind support, such as providing access to data. If the support in question comes with a non-disclosure obligation, that fact should be stated, along with as much information as the obligation permits. If there are no such sources of funds, that fact should be stated explicitly. An “interested” party is any individual, group, or organization that has a financial, ideological, or political stake related to the article.
3. Each author should disclose any paid or unpaid positions as officer, director, or board member of relevant non-profit organizations or profit-making entities. A “relevant” organization is one whose policy positions, goals, or financial interests relate to the article.
4. The disclosures required above apply to any close relative or partner of any author. [L SEP]
5. Each author must disclose if another party had the right to review the paper prior to its circulation.

In reference to (2), the company with which we conducted the RCTs provided us with access to detailed production and personnel data. Our data access is governed by a NDA. I did not receive any other monetary or in-kind support from the company.

In reference to (5), I disclose that the company providing the data has the right to review the manuscript but only to ensure confidentiality is being protected.

David Huffman