

Disclosure Statement for American Economic Association P&P

“Representation in Mobility Data in Emerging Cities”

Daniel Björkegren, Alice Duhaut, Oluchi Mbonu, Geetika Nagpal, Nick Tsivanidis

A telecom operator in Nigeria provided the data used for this study under a public-private partnership with the University of California, Berkeley, and the Lagos Metropolitan Area Transport Authority (LAMATA). The study is independent; the telecom had the right to review the study to ensure confidential information was not disclosed, but did not have the right to change findings or conclusions.

This paper is a product partly of the staff of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development/the World Bank. The findings, interpretations, and conclusions expressed do not necessarily reflect the views of the World Bank, the Executive Directors of the World Bank or the governments they represent. The World Bank does not guarantee the accuracy of the data included in this work.

I declare that I have no other relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in the paper.

The overall project of which this is a part was supported with funding from the World Bank (Research Support Budget, Knowledge for Change Programme, the European Union's Directorate-General for International Partnerships (DG INTPA) and the UK International Development from the UK government under the World Bank's Umbrella Facility for Impact Evaluation), the Clausen Center at UC Berkeley, the Fisher Center for Real Estate and Urban Economics at UC Berkeley, IGC, J-PAL King Climate Action Initiative, the Brown University Seed Fund, the Weiss Fund, and STEG.

Signed,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'N. Tsivanidis', with a stylized flourish at the end.

Nick Tsivanidis