Article title: “The Emerging Market for Intelligence: How Firms Buy and Sell AI”

I previously held a postdoctoral research position at Microsoft Corporation and currently work as a paid research consultant for the company. This article was written in part during and after that relationship, but it does not use Microsoft data, was not funded by Microsoft, was not written on behalf of Microsoft, and does not necessarily reflect the views of Microsoft Corporation. Microsoft Corporation did not have the right to review, approve, or otherwise control the article prior to submission or circulation.

Aside from the consulting relationship described above, I have not received research funding, consulting fees, retainers, grants, in-kind support, data access, or other financial support from any interested party related to this article in the past three years. I do not hold more than $10,000 in equity in any firm that I understand to have financial interests directly related to the subject of the article.

I do not hold any paid or unpaid position as an officer, director, board member, or formal advisor of any relevant nonprofit organization or for-profit entity.

This article does not involve the collection of data on human subjects, and no IRB approval was sought or required.

Sincerely,
