

The author, Meredith L. Fowlie, has received support from the California Air Resources Board to conduct research that informs the design of climate change policy in the state of California. She has also served in an advisory capacity to this board on related policy issues. She has no other relevant or material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.