

Disclosure Statement for Joseph Vavra For Spending and Job Finding Impacts of Expanded Unemployment Benefits: Evidence from Administrative Micro Data

The author received funding for this project from the Becker Friedman Institute at the University of Chicago. The author has no material financial interests to disclose.

This project uses a proprietary dataset from JPMorgan Chase. Prior to circulation, the paper was subject to review by Chase to ensure that privacy protocols were followed and that no confidential proprietary information was disclosed. The data use agreement between the author and JPMorgan Chase stipulates that Chase is not permitted to review the conclusions of the research.

The University of Chicago's IRB reviewed the use of data for this project and issued a Notice of Determination that this research is not considered human subjects research (IRB20-1850).