

Disclosures for Benjamin F. Jones, “A Framework for Economic Growth with Capital-Embodied Technical Change”

November 25, 2023

The author has received two research grants in the last three years. The sponsoring entities are:

- 1) Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. Grant award G-2015-14014.
- 2) U.S. Department of Defense. AFOSR Minerva award FA9550-19-1-0354.

The author is also a co-Principal Investigator for a grant from Open Philanthropy that supports activities of the NBER’s Innovation Working Group.

In the last three years, the author has received compensation for research papers, teaching, and an academic book from the National Bureau of Economic Research, and the author has received honoraria for research-related advice and speaking from the International Monetary Fund, the Aspen Institute, Open Philanthropy, the Brookings Institution, Harvard University, Stanford University, Vanderbilt University, Exxon Mobil, Deerfield Management, and the CME Group. The author has also received compensation as a consultant to Vanderbilt University.

The author served as a trustee of the United World College of the USA until May 2023.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "BF Jones". The letters are cursive and somewhat stylized, with the "B" and "F" being large and connected to the "J" in "Jones".