

HARVARD | BUSINESS | SCHOOL

JULIO J. ROTEMBERG |

WILLIAM ZIEGLER PROFESSOR OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

10/21/2013

As the author of “Penitence after accusations of error: 100 Years of Monetary Policy at the U.S. Federal Reserve,” I declare that I have no current material financial interests that relate to the research described in this paper.

I would like to disclose that I have given talks at both the Federal Reserve Board and at individual Federal Reserve Banks in the past, and that the Federal Reserve reimbursed some of my expenses to attend these events. Also, in 2010, I was a (compensated) Visiting Scholar at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and wrote a paper for a conference at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, for which I was compensated $2000. Before that, I was a (compensated) Visiting Scholar at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston for several years.

I have not relied on external funding to write this paper but expect to receive an honorarium from the NBER for having prepared it for the conference at which it was presented.

Julio J. Rotemberg