

My paper “The World Bank: Why it is Still Needed and Why it Still Disappoints” was prepared as part of my normal duties as a professor at Georgetown University. I received no financial support for producing the paper from any other source. As noted in the paper, I worked for the World Bank for 24 years, but left its employment in December 2012 to join the faculty at Georgetown.

Martin Ravallion